NEW GOSSARD PLANT TO OPEN NEXT WEEK

LATEST INDUSTRIAL ACQUISITION OF JANESVILLE TO EMPLOY AS MANY GIRLS AS CITY CAN GIVE.

ALTERATIONS FINISHED

Building Has Undergone Many Alterations and Will Be Ready for Operation Within a Few Days.

Announcement was made this morning that the Janesville factory of the Gossard Corset company, could be in full operation by the middle of next week. The intervening period to the opening date will permit the remaining machinery to be moved in and installed and the raw material made ready. S. S. Gossard who has been in the city for the past several weeks supervising the alterations of the factory building, at the corner of Court and Main streets, which was purchased by public subscription under plans fostered by the Janesville Commercial club, stated this morning that as much female help as employed, further, he added, if conditions warrant the project, his company will build an additional structure. A. A. Turner, an employee of the Gossard company for the past eight years, who will be superintendent of the local plant in the city, supervising the erection of the machinery. Mr. Turner said this morning that he had no applications for work had been considered but beginning tomorrow he would be able to commence to employ help for the factory. Quite a number of applications, both from Janesville and from girls from without the city have been received to date but due to the rush of getting everything in readiness for early opening, no time was had to consider these. Acceptable work will be turned out by the end of the first week of operation, Mr. Gossard said. The work is of such a nature that some operators will be efficient within the first three days and at no time has the company found it impossible to train an operator in at least ten days. The Janesville plant will manufacture corsets and brassieres complete, the raw material leaving the plant a finished garment and ready for the trade.

There are three spacious floors in the building. Each is well ventilated and lighted and equipped with adequate means of egress in case of fire, from within by wide, easy way and freight elevator and from without by fire escapes. Mr. Gossard paid particular heed to the Wisconsin fire regulations and has made every alteration that would eliminate possible accident. A complete fire sprinkler system is to be installed immediately in the building. As regards sanitation, ventilation and direct light, the building secured by the Gossard people is perhaps the best in the city. To facilitate direct light from the south a line of windows has been put on each floor. Toilet accommodations for the employees have been placed on each floor. The lower floor will be given over to spacious offices and operating rooms. The second and third stories are to contain all machinery for the present. This morning four batteries of twenty machines each had been placed in the premises. Eighty operators work on a similar number of machines are now here and will be erected just as fast as workmen can put them up. With a shipment of more of machinery this morning there was a large amount of raw material to be used at the start next week. The cutting tables will be on the third floor and from here the material will go direct to the operating machines and passing from one to the other will end up a finished product at the end of the line. Here the garments are inspected and satisfactory, then boxed and sent to the stockroom. Different garments require more or less handling by operators as the case may be. As a whole the work has been studied to the point where no one girl is required to take a single stitch more than needed. Some garments require four or five different machines and must go on from twenty-eight to thirty machines before they are ready for the stockroom. The machines are propelled by electric motors with a noiseless chain drive from motor to shafting. A particular feature of Gossard factories is the ingenious lighting systems employed. Through the use of flexible brass arms each operation has an individual electric light and can direct the rays to any portion of the machine as the case may require. Under this system, Mr. Gossard related this morning, the company has found it possible to secure an efficient lighting from an eight watt lamp as from the consumption of many more watts through the employment of a large number of ceiling lights. Mr. Turner, who will be superintendent of the local plant, is an out and out product of the Gossard company. Eight years ago he entered their employ as a cutter. Showing ability he gradually advanced until the time came when a new superintendent would be needed. He was given the Janesville factory in compliance with the policy of the company to educate its employees in its business rather than to secure them from outside sources.

MEAT SUPPLY SHORT IN LARGER CITIES OF GERMAN EMPIRE

Berlin Dispatch Tells of "Meat Lines" and Hardships Worked By Food Shortage.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Berlin, June 2.—For the first time since the outbreak of the war meat is hard to obtain in the capital and larger cities of the German empire.

"Meat Lines" have grown as long as the "butter and milk lines" and these forming them must sometimes wait for hours before they can procure the quota allotted by their cards.

Responsible for this condition are the heavy demands made upon the meat supply by the army and almost total cessation of imports and the government's policy of discouraging the slaughter of meat animals before fattening has given them their maximum butcher weight.

Cattle owners have recently shown a tendency to keep stock from the market because the maximum price arrangement has left them little profit.

On the necessity of feeding meat animals to the limit of meat and fat production, the government and owners of stock are agreed. Both say that a check on butchering now will add in about three months from twenty to twenty-five per cent to the available meat supply.

A fine stand of grass on the meadows and pastures and the arrival of more Indian corn from Roumania are counted upon to produce this improvement.

Prospects for a good pork production are said to be excellent. Last fall the pork was poor in quality and quantity. In the winter of 1914-15 the government, realizing there would be a shortage in food stuffs, advised all pigs in good condition to be slaughtered and their meat preserved.

This was done, but in many cases the meat was so poorly cured, owing to the lack of competent help, it spoiled by the thousands of tons. Since then an effort has been made to bring back pork production to something approaching normal proportion.

The question now is whether it will be possible to obtain foodstuffs necessary to bring this year's animals to good weight. A good potato crop would greatly facilitate this, as would also more Indian corn from Roumania.

While this year's corn crop would hardly influence pork production in Germany, it is the intention to give all of present purchases to pork producers and to distribute the new contract among other stock owners.

An improvement in pork market would also ease the shortage of fat in the empire, which is felt almost more than the shortage of meat.

The necessity for an ample supply of animal fat has never been felt so by the people as by the Germans at present, especially since production of butter fell to almost nothing during the winter months.

There has been a slight improvement in milk and butter situation, and it is expected that the situation will be easily obtainable until several months after the war.

Holland, Denmark and Switzerland cannot make good the export demand which the war has placed upon the dairy industry of Germany.

After the war will import meat and animal fat from foreign countries, and in this manner tide over until the milk and butter production is again ample.

Eggs have been rather plentiful this season. In many cases they have been the principal food item.

Fish also is easily obtained, though a lack of fat has robbed many of the dishes prepared with them of much nutriment.

The one bright spot in Germany's natural cupboard is the fact that grain prospects for present year are exceedingly good.

PRELATE HOLDS SERVICE WHEN CANNONS AND WAR ROCKETS SHAKE ALTER

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

At the front with the Russian Army, June 2.—Under a small tent, June 2, a Russian Pope conducted a midnight Easter service to the accompaniment of an occasional cannon shot and the intermittent glare of Austrian rockets.

It rained, and the soldiers who stood with bowed heads before the map of the altar were drenched. The green and gold robe of the prelate contrasted strangely with the dun of the uniforms and the black and white gowns of a half dozen Sisters of Mercy who stood huddled in the doorway of an adjacent cottage.

Around the Pope's neck was suspended a crucifix upon a ribbon of the Order of St. George, awarded for service on the battlefield. Next to him then the chanting words of the service were partially drowned by the splashing and groaning of guns and ammunition carts lumbering past through the heavy mud, but even the teamsters seemed impressed by the solemnity of the hour and urged on their struggling beasts in subdued tones.

Six high soldiers composed the choir which assisted in the service, their voices blending with the rising and falling tones of the Pope.

All evening long Austrian rockets in greater numbers than usual pierced the darkness. Out in the trenches each little group of soldiers was having its own little celebration of this greatest of all Russian holidays. The lights from their candles apparently aroused the suspicions of the enemy, whose trenches as far as the eye could reach were at this hour aflame at intervals under their cannon bombs.

Finally under his dripping tent the Pope turned to his rain-soaked troops, elevated the crucifix and shouted: "Christ has risen." Murmurs of response ran along the line and was echoed by the white-faced sisters. "He has indeed risen."

DUTCH DOCK LABORER WANTED TO EAT NUMBER POUNDS OF HARDWARE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

London, June 2.—Holland's human stomach is dead.

The "Lancet," leading British journal of medicine, in an exhaustive analysis, treated on "pica" or human craving for unnatural articles of diet, announced today that a Dutch wharf laborer recovered after attempting to digest three pounds and eleven ounces of hardware.

Discharged from hospital, the patient left behind a 5 inch coal chisel, watching eleven ounces and a large assortment of coins, bolts, nuts, rivets, wire nails, tin tacks, screws and washers and a number of small flints he had swallowed.

Six months later he returned, suffering weakness and loss of appetite, symptoms which he evidenced on the day of his visit.

This time a piece of tin plate and a portion of slate pencil were removed from the patient and he immediately succeeded in evading the hospital attendants to swallow a piece of rock and two ounces of camomile tea.

Again he recovered and was removed to an insane asylum where he succumbed to fever and inflammation of the right lung.

POISON GAS BOMBS WERE USED IN ANCIENT WARS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

The Hague, Netherlands, June 2.—The poison gas bomb employed in French warfare today in Europe appears to have a history dating back several centuries.

Attention has just been drawn here to a discovery made during the carrying out of repairs to the naval defenses of the port of Flushing, near the southern frontier of Holland, in 1857.

Some curious stone jars were found in a cleft of the outer wall of the fortress on the east side of the naval harbor. In form they resembled gun shells, and were found to be filled with asphyxiating materials.

A chemical investigation showed that the contents included finely ground Spanish pepper and pepper seeds, gunpowder, fine pitch and antimony.

These ingredients giving rise, in a state of combustion, to an asphyxiating gas, though unfilled were ing gas.

Moreover, on investigation twenty actually found still stored in an old lumber room of the Dutch arsenal at Veere. They must then have been centuries old. The jars agree in form with those described in works on pyrotechnics of 1614 and 1651.

When the enemy in these days he was pelted with these unpleasant missiles, which were used also in close quarter fighting at sea. According to a work dated 1697, they were replaced downwards in the end of the 17th century by pots containing such ingredients as pitch, resin, saltpeter, brimstone, colophony, coal, horse-hoof filings and poisons of various kinds.

MOTHER WHO GIVES BIRTH TO TWINS OR TRIPLETS IS GIVEN WEEKLY ASSISTANCE

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Berlin, June 2.—A mother who gives birth to twins or to triplets in Germany, is entitled not only to the "nursing money" and the "weekly war assistance" which the government provides for its needy women, but may collect the prescribed sum in duplicate or triplicate according to the number of children born, according to a ruling published by the Imperial Insurance bureau.

The decision was the outcome of the suit of a Berlin woman, who, giving birth to twins, was refused nursing money and the weekly war allowance for more than one child.

The insurance branch bureau in her district held that the law permitted only one payment regardless of the number of children born.

The Imperial bureau, which controls all the municipal branches in the empire, holds that it is of the utmost importance for every mother to be nourished in the very best possible way, and that two or three children require more nourishment from the mother than one.

PRACTICE RIGID ECONOMY IN FAMILY OF KING GEORGE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

London, June 2.—Economy is being rigidly practiced in the royal household at Windsor Castle.

To save petrol, the royal motor cars are now seldom used. The queen usually rides behind her team of grays, while Princess Mary travels horseback.

No alcohol is used in the castle, either by the king's family or his servants.

Cider-cup is the strongest drink served; lemonade, orangeade and barley water are the customary drinks.

The king also has given up plovers' eggs, one of his favorite dishes, and eats pheasant's eggs instead.

As shooting has been abandoned both at Windsor and Sandringham, the eating of pheasants' eggs save the food needed to rear young birds, and also lessens the damage to wheat fields from the game. Many pheasants' eggs are sent daily to the army hospitals from the royal preserves.

One of the newest ways of trying to appear deep and thoughtful is to look away off in the distance and say, half regretfully, "Well, it begins to look like we'd have to take Mexico."

What's become of the girl who used to stay at home because she didn't have hardly a thing to wear?

former Gov. Judson Harmon—both gubernatorial possibilities.

Cox has announced himself as a "receptive candidate" for the democratic nomination for governor. Harmon until now has remained silent, leaving to his friends all efforts in his behalf.

Indications this morning were the convention, if it endorses either, might lean towards Cox.

This belief was based upon the slating of War Secretary Newton D. Baker for temporary chairman and U. S. Senator Atlee Pomeroy for permanent chairman. Both Pomeroy and Baker are close to President Wilson and administration democrats.

It was W. L. Finley, democratic state chairman and sponsor for Cox, who, after a hot fight in the state central committee, succeeded in swinging the temporary chairmanship for Baker—and thus assuring a "key-note speech favorable to Cox."

Owing to the fact that the democratic national convention is yet to come, little platform drafting was expected here today. Uncertainty of national issues has forced Ohio democrats to use extreme caution in suggesting any state issues.

Finley and his benchmen were hopeful today no action will be taken that might embarrass democrats later in the campaign.

What the Milk and Rest Treatment Is

The Milk and Rest Treatment in a true sense is not merely refraining from work and drinking milk. Although many consider it so and have experimented along those lines.

I am the only one qualified to give the real treatment in Wisconsin and one of the very few in the entire country.

A patient must absolutely put themselves under my care to secure proper results. They must come to my private hospital and take the treatment as it is prescribed. Then, and only then, can they realize the wonderful results of the "Milk and Rest Treatment."

And the results are wonderful. I can illustrate to you from my own personal experiences and from the experiences of my patients. I have seen patients gain twenty pounds in one week.

You can not take this treatment yourself, neither can you secure it elsewhere in this section. But if you are in a run down, nervous condition, or are troubled with your kidneys, bladder or rheumatism, I can cure you by means of the "Milk and Rest Treatment."

I make no charge in giving you further information regarding this treatment.

SUMMER CLUB HOLDS MEETING THURSDAY

Over One Hundred Enjoy Country Dinner Served in Y. M. C. A. Building—Hear Good Program.

A bountiful country dinner served in genuine country style with plenty of food on the tables so the guests could help themselves, was what the Summer club offered to their members and friends on Thursday at the first meeting of the season. Promptly at noon the tables began to fill and soon the guests seated at three long tables in the main auditorium were enjoying the creamed potatoes, baked beans, escalloped corn, and other dishes which were brought in steaming hot from the kitchens. One of the unique features of the occasion, was the tiny little baking powder biscuit, baked in a new method, fried in butter and served with maple syrup for the delectation of the guests. The cold ham for the meal had also been baked in the apparatus and was pronounced of delicious flavor and tenderness. A lady who demonstrated the capabilities of this new fireless cooker, was Mrs. Frances Seely of Chicago, who is the inventor of this particular type of machine and is engaged in the business of its manufacture.

Over one hundred were served at dinner, the proceeds of which will make a neat little sum for the local rest room, as the food was donated by the members of the club. The regular business meeting was called two o'clock, the president, Mrs. Dunn of Milton, being in charge and the secretary, Mrs. Bates, giving the roll call. Routine business was transacted and a report of the district convention held in April at Delavan, was given by Mrs. D. B. Bliss of Madison. A most complete and interesting paper on the wild flowers of the region was given by Mrs. F. H. Parns. She advised flower lovers to forsake the automobile and go on foot, roadside in search of the beauties of the woodland and meadow. She described the favorite flowers of the localities from the pussy willows of early spring to the late asters and goldenrod, and told of the habitat of each. In closing she quoted Goethe as saying: "Many flowers are lovely, but the wild flowers alone, lead us into the clouds."

A charmingly informal talk on the play of the "Bluebird," by Maeterlinck, was given by Mrs. W. P. Leek of Beloit. She described the wanderings of the two children through the Land of Memory, the "Garden of Pleasure," the "Palace of Night," and the "Palace of the Future," and finally their safe return to the world of reality.

A place on the program was also given to Mrs. Seely who further discussed the possibilities and uses of the fireless cooker. She especially urged their use for the cooking of dried fruits, cereals and all foods requiring a long, slow process. She also pointed out the use of hospitals and institutions and claims that they give good satisfaction for that purpose. She assisted in her demonstration by Miss Elizabeth V. Allen of local domestic science course at the high school. Eight minutes was the time required to bake the biscuits and they were prepared and cooked in the dining room so that all might see the process.

Great credit is due Mrs. E. W. Fisher, under whose supervision the menu and program was carried out, and also to her corps of able assistants. The next meeting of the club will be held in Emerald Grove on June 29.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB GIVE CLOSING PROGRAM AT THE HIGH SCHOOL THIS MORNING

This morning the last program of the year before the main room at the high school was given by the Girls' Glee club and other members of the school. The program of the club was in the form of an Indian sketch and the members wore Indian costumes. Three numbers were sung. Miss Jessica George gave a reading, "The Wooing of Hiawatha," and Miss Dorothy Brigham rendered a piano solo. This marks the last of the interesting entertainment which has been held throughout the year. The time is nearing the close of school. Today was the last day of school for the seniors, and on Monday and Tuesday they will have their final examinations.

AT THE APOLLO.

Elsie Janis Tonight. Elsie Janis is both author and star in "Betty in Search of a Thrill," the production which will be the feature attraction on the Paramount program at the Apollo theatre tonight. The story takes the little New York heiress over a great deal of ground, and the production in consequence is highly spectacular from a scenic point of view. Vivid scenes of cabarets, theatres and city landmarks crowd each other in quick succession. Perhaps the most beautiful pictures of all are taken on a private estate which is a famous showplace among the country houses of American millionaires.

AT BEVERLY THEATRE.

A Troupe of Polar Bears doing remarkable act in Al. G. Barnes' Big Four will show in Janesville, June 9.

Fred Fulton, the Minnesota Giant, who is matched to fight Jess Willard, next Labor Day for the heavyweight championship of the world, will be seen in Janesville June 9, when the Animal Circus arrives to play here. Fulton is with the circus and positively will appear at each performance of a spectacular boxing bout and training stunt.

Conceded by fight experts to be the master of Willard, Fulton is a figure of unusual interest in the fight world. Although as big as Willard, Fulton is as fast on his feet as a middleweight.

The Minnesota Giant started boxing about three years ago, when he was discovered by the well-known promoter, Mike Collins. He is twenty-four years of age, and is of Scotch-Irish parentage.

Fulton weighs 230 pounds and is the fastest heavy-weight boxer since the days of Jim Corbett.

He is six feet four and one-half inches in height, and has a reach of 54 1/2 inches, three inches longer than Willard, and the longest reach of any boxer in the world. This gives him a great advantage to Fulton in his coming fight with the champion of the world.

Robert Harron and Norma Talmadge. Harron plays the part of a banker's son, who gets suspended from college for a lively escapade. He returns to his home town and wins the affection of Norma Talmadge, a stepdaughter of the justice of peace. Sam Bernard in Comedy. Sam Bernard as a chef is the promise held out by "Because He Loved Her," Mack Sennett's newest Keystone comedy, which will be shown tonight at the Beverly on the Triangle programme. In addition to this foremost German comedian cavorting through thirty minutes of hilarious fun is a cast of funmaking headliners, including Glen Cavender as the proprietor of the restaurant where Bernard is the chef; Mae Bush as an extremely pretty cashier in the establishment; and Harry McCoy as a cook.

AT BEVERLY THEATRE.

Wm. S. Hart in "Hell's Hinges." There are some great moments packed with action and suspense in the Ince-Triangle drama, "Hell's Hinges," at the Beverly on Saturday. Among other scenes, two stand out particularly. One is the fight between the tough and the good elements of the town, which results in the temporary victory of the evil forces. They signalize their triumph by burning down the church. But the evil ing fight with the champion of the world. All fight critics of note pronounce Fulton to be the greatest left-hander hitler in the heavyweight division, and he carries the sleep-producer in either hand. Out of the thirty-nine fights Fulton has had he has won thirty-five by knockouts, two by decisions, lost one on a foul and has been beaten but once, that being early in his career when he knew much less about the fight game than he does now. The fight Labor Day is to be pulled off before the club offering the biggest purse. Willard is to receive two-thirds of the gate receipts or a guarantee of $37,500. Fulton gets one-third the gate.

A Minneapolis club already has offered $3,000 for the fight. Fulton travels with the Barnes circus in his own private car with Collins, his manager, and his staff. He receives $1,000 a week and percentage privileges from the Wild Animal Circus.

Having a long act in the circus, Fulton gives the fans a good chance to see what sort of championship timber he is.

doers had not reckoned with Blaze Tracy (Wm. S. Hart). When he comes riding in and finds that the church has been destroyed, the misguided minister killed and the woman he loves in danger of insult, his wrath exceeds bounds. He kills Silk Miller, the crafty and treacherous saloon and gambling house keeper, and stands off a whole room full of desperate men while he shoots the wires in two by which the lamps are suspended. There seems danger that the whole bunch will be consumed in the flames, but Blaze allows them to sink out. In the narrow winding streets, there are scenes of disorder and excitement as the flames of destruction sweep over the whole town. Mable Normand and Roscoe Arbuckle will be seen in a comedy.

Robert Warwick and Frances Nelson in "Human Driftwood" at Apollo Yesterday.

"Human Driftwood" with Robert Warwick and Frances Nelson in the leading roles shown at the Apollo yesterday tell a strong story of life in and around the New York dance halls and in the mining camps of Alaska. It was a play rich in scenic investiture, strong in dramatic action, and interpreted by a cast hard to equal in the point of ability and efficiency.

The mining camp scenes were laid in the mining districts of western Canada, which added a great deal to the atmosphere of the picture. As a whole it was a production that was finished in every respect, though of a character that did not try to hide facts concerning the crooked life in the New York underworld and the rough life in the north. Mr. Warwick is given an opportunity in the play to assume two distinct and different characters, which he did with much ease of manner and grace of execution. Miss Nelson, her sombre beauty, appealing personality and

Taylor Holmes

Star in "His Majesty Bunker Bean," at Myers Theatre, Tuesday evening, June 6. Mr. Holmes heads the original cast as seen for 6 months at the Cort Theatre, Chicago.

In "His Majesty Bunker Bean," the new comedy which comes to the Myers Theatre for one performance, on Tuesday evening, June 6, after its six months' brilliant run in Chicago, Taylor Holmes has found a vehicle well suited to his peculiar talents. The young comedian who is being starred by Joseph Brooks, began his career as a member of Anna Morgan's dramatic school in Chicago. The celebrated English critic, William Archer, who was on a tour of this country at the time, saw Mr. Holmes' performance in "Candida," which the Morgan players were presenting, sought him out and advised him to go to London where Mr. Archer assured him he would be a great success as a professional player. Mr. Archer even agreed to provide him with the opportunity there. Holmes took heed of Mr. Archer's advice and went to London, only to find that no arrangement had been made for his appearance. While in London he met Olga Nethersole and signed with her for a role in "Sapho" and returned to this country with her one year. He then played the role of Poonis with David Warfield in "The Music Master" after which he played three years in stock at Newark and Philadelphia. He then went into vaudeville, playing the Keith and Orpheum circuits. When Robert Edison produced "Strongheart," Mr. Holmes was engaged as stage director. His next engagement was with "The Midnight Sons" at the Broadway theatre, New York for one season. He was featured in "The Comedians" for one season and featured in Henry W. Savage's production of "The Million." He was co-star with Walter Jones in "The Third Party" and immediately prior to his present engagement with "His Majesty Bunker Bean" was one of the all-star casts of "Trilby" which had a long run at the St. Aubert theatre in New York City under the direction of his present manager, Joseph Brooks. Present indications point to a very large seat sale for this engagement.

In a Series of Ten Articles Famous Expert
Lonis De B. Handley of the N. Y. A. C.
Gives Advice to Beginners and Veterans.

Article No. 8. — Rescue of the Drowning.

By LOUIS DE B. HANDLEY.
[Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.]

THE art of life saving may be divided into two parts—first, the rescue of those in danger of drowning; second, resuscitation. They are really distinct branches of the subject, for, while the rescue work requires courage, good watermanship and practical experience, resuscitation is chiefly a matter of technical knowledge intelligently applied. It will best serve the purpose, therefore, to treat each part separately.

The first question to be considered in going to the assistance of those threatened by a watery grave is self protection. Indeed, if the rescuer is not able to guard against the attacks of the one he is trying to save his own life as well as the other's is in jeopardy.

For this reason the education of every swimmer, man or woman, should include a course of water wrestling, the breaks taught enabling one to escape the clutches of a drowning person, the holds to gain absolute control in carrying a stranger to safety.

Without going too deeply into the subject it will be well to touch upon those particular breaks and holds which through occasional practice will fit any one for the humanitarian work he may be called upon at any moment to perform.

The life saver should bear in mind, of course, that prevention is better than cure and make it his aim to approach any one in danger from the back, thus avoiding all chance of being seized. But this is not always possible.

1. Back neck carry in life saving. 2. Proper position to carry a drowning man with back stroke.

sible, and the wise plan is to be fully prepared for anything.

A simple and most effective way has been devised for eluding the grasp of fear-stricken drowningers. It should be learned by all, because it has the double advantage of furnishing an effortless means of escape and also of giving mastery of the situation at the same time. Here is what to do: As soon as the stranger raises an arm to take hold of you thrust out quickly your own hand and place it squarely under the uncovered armpit; then use this secured purchase to push your self under water, turn sideways, pass under the uplifted arm and come up. You will find yourself behind your man, able to apply any one of several practically unbreakable grips.

Should it happen, however, either through carelessness or unexpected circumstances, that you are caught and imprisoned it is an excellent plan not to start fighting at once for freedom, but to relax completely and remain absolutely motionless for a few seconds. Not only does the cessation of all movement cause an instinctive loosening of muscular tension on the part of the strangle, but it permits the concentration of energy for a supreme effort.

The hold one is most likely to encounter is dealt with as follows: When seized by the wrists raise the hands swiftly, then jerk them down and out with a violent rotary motion. If encircled by the other's arms around the shoulders throw up your own arms suddenly, wide at the sides, or rest your hands wherever possible and force yourself downward. Either method will enable you to slip under the tackle and work behind your opponent before coming to the surface. If the same embrace is applied below the elbows or you run into a leg lock, extricate one arm, then place the hand on the other's face, palm over his mouth, fingers on either side of his nostrils, and while thus closing the respiratory channels press hard. When caught from the rear relax immediately, as suggested above; then twist around with an abrupt, vigorous effort of every part of the body. Once facing your assailant, the described breaks can be resorted to.

Professor Henry Ellonsky, the long distance swimmer, has a method distinctly his own for getting behind a person if gripped from the rear. He clutches the man with both hands about the head and sinks in the water. At the same time he pulls the man's head down with a jerk, performing a sort of "dying snore." In this way the person goes over his shoulders, and the professor comes to the surface and grasps him with a rear hold.

We come now to the supporting of the victim to safety. There are many carries advocated, and their use must be determined by circumstances.

A tired swimmer who knows what he is about may be told to place his hand on your shoulder and stretch out flat, so as to offer as little resistance as possible to towing, then be helped ashore without difficulty. An unconscious person should be turned face up, given a slight shove in the small of the back to bring the body into a

DISEASE EPIDEMIC

REPORTED ON WANE

Fewer Contagious Disease Cards on Janesville Homes, City Health Officer Reports.

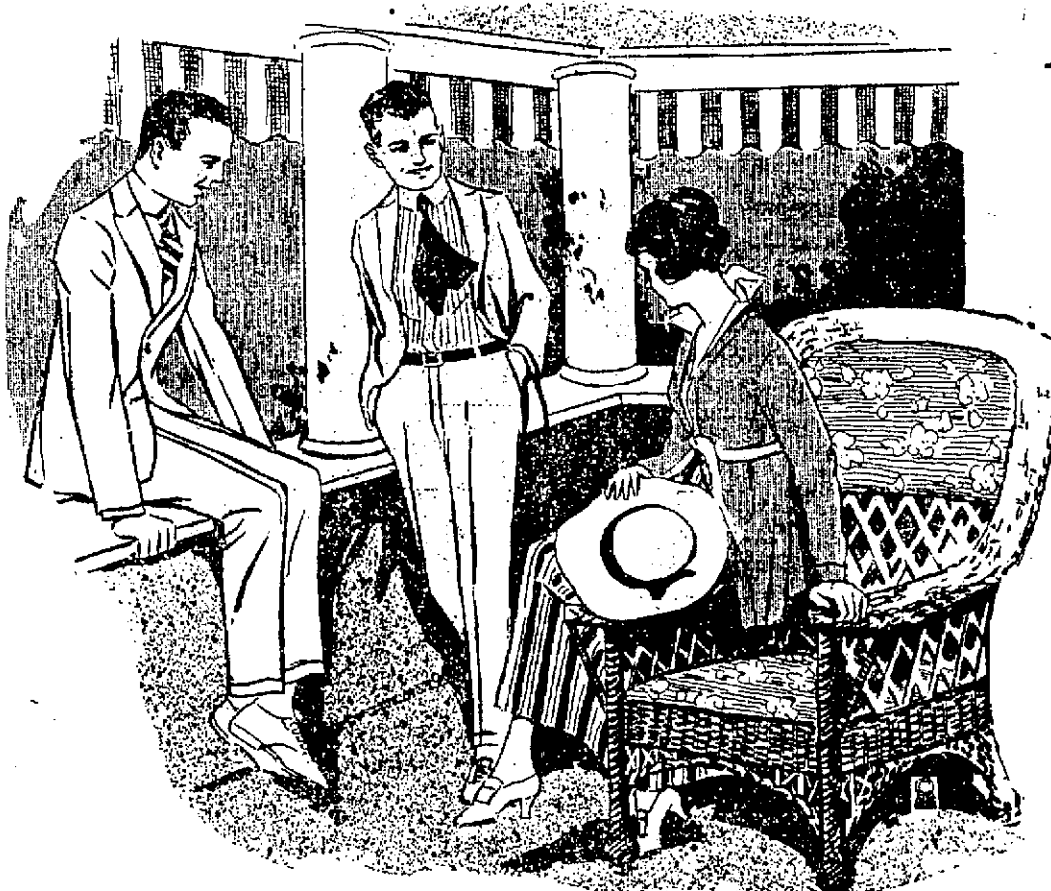

Serious danger of an epidemic of contagious disease, which has threatened Janesville during the last six or seven months, is about over, but there are still cases enough of dread maladies to cause citizens to use the utmost precautions to prevent a further spread of disease. The report for the month of May, filed this morning by Dr. S. B. Buckmaster, city health officer, stated that over four hundred contagious disease cards had been used in Janesville for measles during the winter and spring months.

There have been an unusually large number of scarlet fever cases, the cause of which can be plainly traced back to the serious epidemic of scarlet fever last year. Every case of measles has been eliminated according to Dr. Buckmaster, as there is not a card up for this action at the present time. The cases of scarlet fever have also decreased, and there are now five cases of this disease, two of which are very recent. There is also one card up for diphtheria and two for whooping cough. Warning is given and it should be strictly heeded, to use every precaution against the spread of these diseases.

During May there were but six marriages, and evidently Dan Cupid was loafing on the job, or the future brides were waiting for the month of June before having the nuptial knot tied. During May there were two deaths and twenty-seven births, the stark beating out the Grim Reaper by seven.

Read What This Avalon Farmer Says:

Use the Want Ad in your business and forget all else. It will do your work for you. You don't believe it? Well, just read below:

Gentlemen:—Have used the little "Want Ads" in the Gazette five or six times and never failed to receive answers to them. On May 1st, 3rd., and 5th., I used the following ad:

FOR SALE—Hatching eggs from Thompson & Parks' Barred Rocks. Pedigreed. We have the goods. Write Green Lawn Poultry Farm, Avalon, Wis. 22-5-1-3-eod.

And soon I found I could hardly supply the demand for hatching eggs. My advice is, if you have anything to sell use a Gazette Want Ad and forget it. It will take care of itself.

A Good Soldier of Jesus Christ

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE
Inspector in Evangelism, Moody
Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—II Tim. 2:3.

I. A Good Soldier Will Enlist.—He knows that he can serve his cause better in the regular army than by fighting alone. Guerrilla warfare as a rule is ineffective, demoralizing, and disreputable. It damages the very cause it tries to help. Even so, a good soldier of Jesus Christ will take his place in the church. There he can work most effectively; there he will have the help of other Christians; but, above all, there dwells his lord and master, whose constant prayer is, "Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me, where I am, that they may behold my glory."

Nor does the good soldier stop to inquire whether all the members are congenial or faithful. If every member but himself were unfaithful, it would still be his duty and privilege to join the church because Christ is there.

Should a soldier refuse to put on the uniform his sincerity would be questioned. The follower of Jesus Christ who refuses to join the church is justly liable to the same suspicion. Moreover, he damages the very cause which he desires to help, for an outsider who ought to be in the church brings as much reproach upon the cause as an insider who ought to be out.

II. A Good Soldier Will Not Entangle Himself With Outside Matters.—What would you think of a soldier who should report for duty bringing with him a dog and a fishing rod and a bicycle? He would doubtless be told that while these things were well enough in their place, he was expected to fight and not to amuse himself.

It is said that a soldier who enlisted in the Civil war took along his kit of watchmaker's tool and while they were in camp he did considerable business. But one day when the order came to strike tents and prepare for battle, he looked around his tent in dismay and exclaimed, "Why, I can't possibly go, for I have twelve watches to repair which I have promised by Saturday night."

That man had forgotten what he enlisted for. In like manner there are Christians who entangle themselves with worldly companions and questionable amusements to such an extent as to greatly hinder their usefulness and influence.

III. A Good Soldier Obeys Orders.—He simply goes where he is sent and does what he is told to do. He seldom does what he likes to do, but he obeys his own movements. Like the brave hand which Tennyson has made immortal:

Thou'rt not to make reply,
Thou'rt not to reason why,
Thou'rt but to do and die,
Valiant, not daunted.

So the good soldier of Jesus Christ will obey orders. Enlistment means entire surrender, and henceforth the great question of life is, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do. Nor will I argue the question of duty, but invariably give his master the benefit of the doubt. It is to be feared that some disciples have not reached this point.

IV. A Good Soldier Will Endure Hardship.—He expects it. Sleepless nights and weary days, forced marches and scanty fare, probable sickness and possible death—these are what he looks forward to; but if these are the price of liberty he is willing to pay it. When Garibaldi was going out to battle he told his troops what he wanted them to do. They said:

"General, what are you going to give us for all this?"
"I don't know what else you will get; but you are sure to get hunger and cold and wounds and death. How do you like it?"
His men stood for a moment in silence then they cried, "We are the men, we are the men." That is the spirit of the true soldier, and how common it is, thank God!

When the first Napoleon was in his glory, he had what he called his Old Guard, a body of tried veterans, picked men from the whole army. He always held them in reserve; but when danger was imminent he would ride along the line and say, "Soldiers of the Old Guard, the liberties of France are in your hands. You have never failed her yet and I know you will not now. Soldiers of the Old Guard, forward march!" Instantly from the whole battalion would come the cry, "Vive Napoleon! Vive la France!" and with one wild hurrah they would follow him into the thickest of the fight to the cannon's mouth, anywhere, and always to victory—always but once.

Soldiers of Jesus Christ, your master needs an Old Guard in every church, a little company of tried men and women upon whom he can always rely, workers who will not shrink or complain, who are willing to do their own share, and more, too, if necessary. Who will join the Old Guard?

Pleasant Fields of Holy Writ

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Second Quarter. Lesson X. Acts VI 6:15, June 4, 1916.

THE CALL OF THE WEST.
Homer's genius has gilded the Aegean Isles and main, but among all his classic scenes of love and prowess, the New Testament flashes out a picture that in pathos, significance and power surpasses them all.

After revisiting the converts of his first missionary tour, an act prompted by tender pastoral solicitude, St. Paul tried to enter a new field. He naturally turned to those nearest. But two doors in succession were shut sharply in his face. The same hand that barred the way to Bithynia and Asia, however, opened a third door wide, and by an unmistakable sign bade the apostle enter. In the word world of light, in a vision from Macedonia, recognized by his garb and accent, appears with outstretched hand and in suppliant tone cries "Come over into Macedonia and help us!"

The religious destiny of Europe was quivering in the balance. What if St. Paul had been disobedient to this "heavenly vision?" The history of the world would have to be rewritten from that date. You must needs strike out of the New Testament the rest of the Acts of the Apostles, and the epistles to the Corinthians, Thessalonians and Philippians. But St. Paul had not begun his career by being disobedient to heavenly visions. So the early morning found him on the dock, inquiring for some ship bound for the port of Macedonia. Heaven favors the travelers. They sail before the wind. Brief voyage! Insignificant company! How little their fellow-passengers suspected the stupendous consequences of their passage. Yet they carry the seeds of a new civilization for the continent of Europe and the then-discovered hemisphere. Some one says that as from Macedonia, Europe sent a conqueror to Asia in the person of Alexander, so now Asia sends a conqueror to Europe in the person of Paul.

There is no finer commentary on the saying that the "kingdom of heaven cometh not with observation" than this incident affords. The first preaching of the gospel west of the Hellespont was to an insignificant company of Hebrew women on a river bank. But St. Paul was too veteran a missionary to despise an opening apparently so small and humble. He unfolded the doctrine of Christ with as much care in that woman's prayer meeting, as he, later, did in presence of the Areopagites in Athens.

In that little company by the river side there was one woman whose name will be held in everlasting remembrance as the first Christian convert in Europe, Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira. What if Lydia had not gone to prayer meeting that day? She might have reasoned "These heathen know nothing about a Sabbath. It matters nothing to them whether I keep it or not. My close since there is no synagogue here, I do go to." Besides if I do not keep open, these dark heathen may be tempted to do something bad, while otherwise they would be just buying goods at my counter." But Lydia was a dealer in purple, yard wide and of fast color, not in sophistry. So when the Sabbath came up went her shuttles and out she went to worship.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.
Asia and Bithynia, where Paul was prevented from preaching, were not "passed over" in the Divine purpose. It was only a question of time and agent. These provinces may not have been ripe for the gospel; or some one else could work in them who was not adapted for the field St. Paul was about to be called to. May the inference not be made that the Lord of Harvest still surveys the field, restraining here and impelling there?

That Bithynia and Proconsular Asia were later evangelized is evident from the fact that St. Peter salutes them in his first epistle. * * * It is worthy of note that the first convert in Europe was a native of one of the interdicted provinces. She may in letter or person have later been a messenger of grace to her fellow-provincials. * * * It is said of the famous California trees, those tallest spires of Nature's cathedral, that they spring from dry seed. So the Christian church in Europe had the smallest possible beginning—a woman's prayer meeting. Paul, Luke, Sars and Timothy were not in the world counts. * * * Roman Imperialism was born at Philippi when Brutus and Cassius went down before Anthony and Augustus. But an empire more universal and enduring gained its first victory on the same spot a hundred years later. * * * Lydia was remembering the Sabbath day to keep it holy. She might have considered herself excused from the commandment in her present environment. No synagogue, no one to read the Law or Prophets. Gentile shops all open. Why keep the Sabbath? * * * In that lovely Oriental scene, where Abraham's servant finds a wife for Isaac, the servant utters a most significant word when he says, "I being in the way, the Lord led me." So Lydia all unconsciously by her love and loyalty was putting herself in the way of hearing the gladdest message that ever falls on human ear. * * * "The Spirit of Jesus" (R. V.) This is the only occurrence of the expression, the Spirit promised by Jesus, sent in answer to his prayer, by whom we are to be "led" and in whom "walk" and "live." It was this Spirit that gave token to the waiting missionaries. The Man of Macedonia in the vision represented the great unseen multitude in the night of moral darkness longing for the dawn of Truth. * * * A woman's prayer meeting was the cradle of the infant church on the continent of Europe. Never despise the day of small things. * * * All circumstance conspire to make Troas the most appropriate place for the appearance of this significant vision. On this spot Europe and Asia had met in a stubborn and epoch-making conflict. Again the Continents meet but this time not with noise and tumult of battle but with voice of prayer and song, mightier weapons than those of steel.

June 4, 1916. Job XXVII, 1-23. CONSECRATION OF MONEY.

(Consecration Meeting.)
Money in itself may not be a thing of real value. The fact that a certain substance has been adopted in law or custom as medium of exchange gives it its worth. The individual as well as the state has power to increase the value of money in hand. The increment in the case of the individual may not appear in the increased value of exchange. It is true, but when a man has intelligently devoted part or all of his means specifically to the betterment of his fellows he has really augmented the value of his money incalculably. As in the parable, the five talents and the two talents dedicated to "the Good" always double themselves. If a man does not do this, what does it amount to "though he heap up silver as dust." His is the "house of a moth." The "storm will hurl him out of his place and men shall clap their hands at him and hiss" in derision. On the contrary he who with set and wise purpose separates his money to the sacred use, finishes his course amid the benisons of his fellows.

BANTING WILL RESIGN AS PRINCIPAL AT STOUTON

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Question: I have a large lawn about my new house which I have just had graded. I wish to set out some shrubbery and would like to know where to set it, whether along the drive or in the center of the lawn, or about the house? What shrubs would you suggest?

Answer: Without a map of your grounds and further knowledge as to your surroundings it is impossible for me to advise you definitely. There are, however, some general principles in landscape gardening that should be borne in mind. The result at which one should aim in landscape gardening is to produce a pleasing picture. This is best done when the lawn is left an open space of green, with the house in the center, not standing out conspicuously so as to draw all attention to itself, but appearing as if growing out of the ground and in perfect harmony with its surroundings.

To accomplish this result the foundation of the house should by hidden by shrubbery just what kinds depends somewhat upon the architecture of the house. If the house is of bungalow type different shrubs are required than if the house is higher. Again if the foundations of the house are high a different treatment is required than if the house sits closer to the ground. The presence or absence of porches, and windows and other projections will also influence the character of the shrubbery about the house.

Other planting should be placed about the border of the lawn framing the picture. To do this effectively the planting should be in masses, not rows of individual shrubs. L. H. Bailey in Garden Making gives good advice as follows:

"Avoid scattered effects. Flowers and high colored foliage are most effective against a background of green foliage. A flower bed in the middle of the lawn is only a flower bed; against the border planting it is not only a flower bed, but it may also be a structural part of the picture."

It is too late this year for planting, and since you are undecided as to what you want, perhaps it is just as well. You will have a whole season in which to make a study of your needs. You should visit the nursery and see the shrubs growing and you should aim to see other grounds that are well planned and make a study of them. You will not wish to copy any of them but you can learn how their pleasing effects were secured and may perhaps also profit by other people's mistakes. There are some cautions it is well to bear in mind. Be sure in selecting your shrubs for planting that you select those that are hardy in Wisconsin. The university agricultural experiment station puts out a bulletin that is helpful to those who are considering planting. It is No. 108 and is called "Trees and Shrubs for Shade Ornament." It gives a list of shrubs tested for hardiness in Wisconsin.

Another thing to be taken into consideration is whether you are able to spend much time caring for the things you have set out. Some trees and shrubs demand for successful growth much care and attention, but repay this by their beauty. If one has little time to attend to plants, better select those that are comparatively free from plant enemies and easy to care for.

Another caution to be observed is, do not plant too much. When plants are small they do not make much of showing. Remember that they will grow rapidly and try to form a picture of what they will be in two or three years. The effect is spoiled if the place appears overrun with shrubbery.

Of varieties for all around purposes nothing is better than the beautiful Spiraea Van Houttei now coming into bloom. It has to recommend its fine foliage which is not subject to plant disease or insect pest. Its graceful, drooping branches, its mass of white blossoms and its adaptability to any position. Though it grows naturally from five to six feet in height, it will bear some pruning and may be kept down to three or four feet by cutting off the branches after its blooming period.

Another good spiraea is the Sorbifolia, which bears long spikes of showy white flowers in June or July and has leaves like the Mountain Ash. The Barbaras are a useful group of plants also. The Berberis Thunbergii, with its spoon shaped leaves of brilliant green, is easily grown in almost any situation, and its shrubs add contrast to that of other plants. This will grow to the height of five feet but may be kept down by pruning. It has the further recommendation of its beautiful clusters of crimson berries in autumn.

For taller shrubs there are the well known lilacs of which there are many varieties not in common use. Lilacs are one of these, its white flowers appearing about two weeks later than those of the other varieties. The common snowball is a beautiful shrub but so subject to disease that it is difficult to handle. Belonging to the same family is the High Bush Cranberry which resembles the snowball in wood and foliage and is more reliable. This has red berries in the fall.

Sumacs and dogwoods too are good shrubs and the beautiful syringas are deservedly popular.

There are two Lyrdranceas that are beautiful shrubs and hardy, the arbutus and the periclymenum. The arbutus blooms in June, continuing through August. The blossoms are white, large and abundant. This plant is well adapted for hedges, so also is the Privet which is almost evergreen and dense. Other excellent shrubs are hedges or groups are the Rugosa roses, which unlike other roses are not subject to the insect pests which make most roses so difficult to grow with success. These roses and their hybrids deserve to be used more commonly and are to be heartily recommended.

If you have a rug, a couch or any other article of household furniture to get rid of, use a Gazette want ad. It will surely sell it.
